3D PRINTER AT LIBRARY

MakerBot Replicator 2X

McKee Library is now the proud owner of a MakerBot Replicator 2X 3D printer. The printer features a dual nozzle that utilizes fused filament fabrication.

For more specific information on the printer and its specifications, you can visit <http://store.makerbot.com/replicator2x.html>.

com/replicator2x.html.

Ron Miller is currently working to get the printer ready for patron use by calibrating the nozzles and performing trial runs of the printer's capabilities.

We will update you as soon as the printer is operational.

SCHOLARLY RESEARCH

Lincoln Library Reserved for Faculty

Looking for a quiet place on campus to conduct research? Look no further than the Lincoln Library, located on the third floor.

Due to increased demand for faculty research space, the Lincoln Library, once utilized for silent study for students, is now reserved for faculty use.

To access the Lincoln Library, please stop by the circulation desk for a key. The space is

Campus Research Day Announced

Campus Research Day is back and better than ever! The event, now sponsored by McKee Library, will be held on Tuesday, April 15, 2014.

Katie McGrath, event coordinator, states, "Campus Research Day is an exciting opportunity for our students to get authentic experience which prepares them for real life."

Make sure to include this important academic event in your syllabus and calendar.

For more information, please contact Katie McGrath.

Library on the Move

Library Changes for Fall

McKee Library is making much needed changes to better serve our patrons.

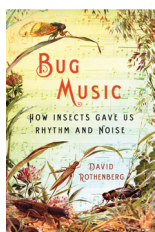

- The Writing Center is moving to the first floor in what was previously part of the reference section.
- One section of the compact shelving located in periodicals has been removed to allow for additional study tables.

- A silent study room is planned for the former Writing Center space.
- A Maker Space, a room for creative projects, is in the works for the former media office.
