Southern Adventist University KnowledgeExchange@Southern

Blog

Interactive Journalism: Investigating Diversity
Project

1-29-2019

Congress is diverse. But what about churches?

Alva Johnson

Southern Adventist University, alvajohnson@southern.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://knowledge.e.southern.edu/interactivejour_blog

Part of the Christian Denominations and Sects Commons, and the Journalism Studies Commons

Recommended Citation

Johnson, Alva, "Congress is diverse. But what about churches?" (2019). Blog. 3. https://knowledge.e.southern.edu/interactivejour_blog/3

This Web Publication is brought to you for free and open access by the Interactive Journalism: Investigating Diversity Project at KnowledgeExchange@Southern. It has been accepted for inclusion in Blog by an authorized administrator of KnowledgeExchange@Southern. For more information, please contact jspears@southern.edu.

INVESTIGATING DIVERSITY

Exploring Race, Gender, and Unity in the Adventist Church

JANUARY 29, 2019 BY ALVA JOHNSON

Congress is diverse. But what about churches?

The diversity of the 116th U.S. Congress is a hot topic these days. But what about churches? How much do they reflect the demographics of the nation?

In 2014, the Pew Research Center surveyed more than 35,000 Americans from all 50 states about religious issues. Researchers found a wide variety of diversity levels among U.S. religions. Of 30 religious groups – including Muslims, Catholics and Jehovah's

Witnesses – Seventh-day Adventists led the pack as the most racially and ethnically diverse religion in the nation.

But what does that mean, exactly? And how did that diversity come to be?

This week, we launch "Investigating Diversity: Exploring Race, Gender and Unity in the Adventist Church," a multimedia journalism project led by students in an Interactive Journalism class at Southern Adventist University.

We will drill down into the numbers and uncover the demographic trends driving SDA diversity numbers.

While we work on the project, we'll share our research, as well as insights from our personal journeys. You might even learn a thing or two about interactive journalism.

In the meantime, what's your church diversity story?

UNCATEGORIZED