Keynote Address

8:00 – 9:15

Lynn Wood Hall Chapel

Welcome	Dr. Bob Young, Senior Vice President for Academic Administration Katie McGrath, Campus Research Day Chair
Prayer	Dennis Negron, Vice President for Student Services
Introduction of Speaker.....	Deyse Bravo-Rivera, Library Director
Keynote Address.....	Rafael V. Davalos, PhD Irreversible Electroporation for Brain Cancer Treatment

About Dr. Davalos & His Research

Irreversible Electroporation (IRE) is a new focal ablation technique we invented to treat patients with unresectable tumors. IRE therapy uses small (1-2mm) surgical probes to deliver low-energy microsecond pulses for approximately 5 minutes. These pulses induce nanoscale defects within the lipid bilayers of the targeted tissue, killing the cells with sub-millimeter resolution at therapy margins. Through treatment planning algorithms developed by our laboratory, the IRE zone can accurately be predicted to optimize treatment outcome and mitigate thermal effects. Treatment planning is complicated by the fact that the field distribution, the greatest single factor controlling the extents of IRE, depends on the electrode configuration, pulse parameters and any tissue heterogeneities. IRE is unique among tissue ablation techniques in affecting only the cell membrane while tissue molecules, everything encompassing collagen structures to proteins, remain intact, thereby making treatment near critical structures such as major blood vessels and nerves possible. We are currently developing IRE for the treatment of Malignant Glioma (MG), and in particular glioblastoma multiforme (GBM), which has a patient median survival of only 15 months. One of the reasons for poor survival is that glioma cells typically infiltrate the brain up to 2cm beyond the volume of the visible tumor. Our preclinical work to date has focused on helping canine patients with naturally occurring MG, which are excellent translational models of human MG. Our results show that IRE treatment can be planned and monitored with techniques used routinely in neurosurgical practice, and administered in a minimally invasive fashion. Results of our ongoing trials have been extremely positive, further supporting that IRE is effective for the treatment of MG, including tumors refractory to surgery, radio- and chemotherapies.

Rafael V. Davalos is a Professor in the Department of Biomedical Engineering and Mechanics and the Virginia Tech – Wake Forest University School of Biomedical Engineering and Sciences. He also holds Adjunct Appointments in Mechanical Engineering, the Wake Forest Comprehensive Cancer Center and at the Wake Forest Institute of Regenerative Medicine. Dr. Davalos has 14 issued patents, which have been licensed to 5 companies. He serves on the editorial board for the ASME Journal of Medical Devices and IEEE Transactions on Biomedical Engineering. Dr. Davalos received his BS from Cornell University and his MS and PhD from the University of California, Berkeley. Prior to his career as a faculty member, Davalos was a Principal Member of Technical Staff at Sandia National Laboratories. In 2012, he received the award for the Most Outstanding Dissertation Advisor at Virginia Tech. In 2014, Dr. Davalos received the Virginia Tech ICTAS Innovator Award and the Innovator award at TechNite 2014. His invention for non-thermal ablation was listed in NASA Tech Briefs as one of the top 7 technological breakthroughs of '07 and has been used to treat over 5000 people with cancer. He has over 70 peer-reviewed articles, 8 book chapters, and 8 journal/book covers. Dr. Davalos is the recipient of the 2006 HENAAC award for the Nation's Most Promising Hispanic Engineer, the NSF CAREER, and was named a Wallace H. Coulter Fellow and an ASME Fellow.
