DEDICATION

DEL and VERNA DIMICK

When we decided to dedicate this annual to your family, there were many reasons to do so for both of you, and we hope that we do not take up too much space trying to name just a few of them. We are thinking of all the hours you spend helping others, of all the time you spend giving advice. We are thinking of your wife, for the untold hours she spends in the laundry, and for her eternal cheerfulness and patience with the students. And we are thinking of all the times you both are found helping where you are needed most but where it is not your duty, and of your patience in trying to teach others as you work. For all this and so much more, we are dedicating this edition of DOWN LITTLE CREEK LANE to you, as a small token of our appreciation.

DEDICATION

LEE and ELLEN DIMICK

This year, in looking over all the people who we could have dedicated this annual to, we decided that the best would be your family. Now we would like to say why. For all the work you have put into the work program, making sure it is just right; for your willingness to lead whenever called upon, and doing it well. To your wife, for all the hard work she does at the Sanitarium, and lately for the teaching she has had to do there. And both of you for caring so much for the students and always being willing to help in any way. Also for other things, too numerous to mention here, we dedicate this edition of DOWN LITTLE CREEK LANE to you and yours, in hopes that it begins to show how much we thank you.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Today, educators are becoming more and more concerned about quality education. There is talk about career ladders for teachers and programs to pay more to master teachers. While these ideas may help in the public sector, I am thankful that as Christians we have a better concept of what true education is. Yet, I believe that we tend to overlook the best part of Christian education as we try to follow worldly patterns.

We are told that Jesus' "education was gained directly from the Heaven-appointed sources; from useful work, from the study of the Scriptures and of nature, and from the experiences of life,-- God's lesson-books." Ed. 77:2. The purpose of true education prepares us for service. "All things both in heaven and in earth declare that the great law of life is a law of service." Ed. 103:2.

This concept is directly opposite to the philosophy we find in the world today. Yet, I am convinced that true happiness comes only as we learn to serve. This brings greater satisfaction than any amount of money or possessions. The challenge for each student and each staff member of Little Creek is to be willing to dedicate your life to the field of service that God calls you to fill.

Kenneth Johnson

THE FOUNDER'S MESSAGE

We have no fear for the future unless we forget how the Lord has led us in the past.

The future often looks uncertain; more so today than ever before. I should not advocate constantly looking back. We must face the future; but to face it with courage, we need often to look back lest we forget how past problems were met by provisions we never would have imagined.

God never promises a life without difficulties, for trials are His chosen means for developing faith and courage to face the future.

BEHIND THE SCENES

This year the annual staff has tried to make an annual that is full of faces. Some are smiling, some frowning, some playing, and some working.

We hope that, as you look through this in the years to come, that these faces will always bring you pleasant memories of your time spent here.

Success

ISN'T LIKE INSTANT
SOUP

You can't just add water and stir. It requires time, commitment, sacrifice, and plain hard work. And goals, especially goals. People like you can make a difference with the right goals and real commitment. Companies like McKee Baking Company look for people who have the desire and ability to grow. Who knows? After that, the soup's on!

The Master's program in Physical Therapy is just one way that Andrews University teaches caring people how to care.

Teaching a handicapped child how to walk.

Helping an injured truck driver regain the use of a broken arm so he can return to work – and provide for his wife and children.

Giving an elderly woman the confidence to know that her broken hip will heal – with proper treatment and time.

Physical therapists know how to do these things. And they do them every day. That is what makes a physical therapist such a caring person and physical therapy such a caring profession.

At Andrews University, we're teaching students how to help people in these uniquely caring ways. And our new master's degree in physical therapy makes Andrews the only Adventist school offering an entry-level graduate program in this vital medical profession.

This should come as no surprise. The master's degree in physical therapy is just the latest addition to Andrews' wide selection of graduate programs in the caring professions. Professions like nursing, education, counseling, and ministry.

So if you want to teach handicapped children how to walk, or if you want to become a caring professional in some other important discipline that touches the lives and hearts of human beings, call us toll-free on the Andrews In-Line and find out more about how Andrews can teach you how to care. Nationwide 1-800-253-2874. In Michigan

“My name is Kristie.
My college is Southern.”

I'm sometimes asked why I chose to come to Southern. I think the one thing that makes it so special is its people. I know that once I've graduated, the things I'll remember will be the friends I've made, singing with my roommate at Afterglow, and our late night talks about life and love.

I did get a little homesick at first, and I do get frustrated with classes from time to time. Who doesn't? But in the end, I am proud of all the hard work I've done, and I realize just how much I've grown. You'll grow too . . . at Southern.
