Why Major in Modern Languages at Southern?

Participation in Adventist Colleges Abroad for one year is required for all modern languages majors, but it does not delay graduation. Students take full loads while away, including general courses, and earn credits that transfer to Southern.

Students have the opportunity to practice their language skills on campus in French and Spanish Sabbath School classes.

The department also offers courses in American Sign Language. Southern Deaf Fellowship, the first Seventh-day Adventist church of its kind, is located only minutes away from school and immerses students in deaf culture.

Cultural bridge-building prepares students to reach the world for Christ; professors are experts at the integration of faith and learning.
