CENTERS FOR THE STUDY OF 19TH CENTURY AMERICA

Library exhibits the five collections held in the Center for the Study of 19th Century America during recent event

The annual Center for the Study of 19th Century America celebration, formerly known as the Mark Twain Celebration, saw the launch of several new collections added to the Center, joining the already existing Duane and Euince Bietz Collection and Thomas Memorial Collection.

19th Century Collections

The Center for the Study of 19th Century America holds five core collections that display different facets of 19th Century American culture.

For more information on the library’s special collections, please visit the Special Collections Policy and Description page on the library’s website.

God After Darwin: A Theology of Evolution
John. F. Haught
In God After Darwin, eminent theologian John F. Haught argues that the ongoing debate between Darwinian evolutionists and Christian apologists is fundamentally misdirected. He argues that Darwin's disturbing picture of life, instead of being hostile to religion—as scientific skeptics and many believers have thought it to be—actually provides a most fertile setting for mature reflection on the idea of God.

Puppy Day
Students will be able to spend time interacting with dogs from a local animal shelter on Dec. 12 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m at McKee Library. The library has decided to provide this service for students because it has been shown that interacting with dogs can help reduce stress.
