NUMBER 6

President Says 'Thanks'

By LYNN SAULS

President Elect,

SMC Alumni Association

A big THANK YOU to those who participated in the recent Homecoming activities! I know that many of you, especially from the classes of '42 and '57, traveled long distances to meet with former friends, view at first hand the exciting changes taking place in the Valley, and sense anew the spirit of friendliness and dedication that still permeates the campus after all these years.

And a big THANK YOU to those who have voluntarily and upon request sent in newsy items about yourself, your work, and your family. The columns in the BULLETIN made possible by your responses have to a great degree helped fulfill the purpose listed first in the Association's Constitution—"To stimulate the spirit of fellowship and brotherhood among former graduates and students."

And THANKS to those who have directed young people to enroll at SMC. Our growth over the past ten years from 457 to 1206 has been due, not only to the evangelistic thrust in the Southern Union, but also to the way SMC's graduates have upheld the school in their contacts made within and without the Union. Actually, 357 of this year's student body come from faraway places.

And THANKS to you who have helped organize alumni chapters in various sectors of the globe. I appeal to you to locate and reclaim for Christ those former SMC graduates and students in your area who no longer enjoy Christian fellowship.

And THANKS to you who are supporting, not only morally but financially, the projects being undertaken by the Alumni Association. Various gift plans have been suggested and are being followed by different members. Some may want to become Centenier

Franz Calls for Educating The Heart at Homecoming

"The most important training at Southern Missionary College is the education of the heart for service," said Elder C. O. Franz, associate secretary of the General Conference, in speaking at the special Alumni Homecoming services at the Collegedale Church.

A graduate of SMC in the class of 1932, Elder Franz told the assembled alumni, students and community people, that "my first impression as a student here was one of courteous, Southern, Christian hospitality. The personal interest in me did much in forming my character."

Speaking on "Remembering," Elder Franz said that "heart training comes first at SMC now as it did when I was here. Its deans took time to encourage us as young, immature men and women. We had problems then, as you have them today, and the faculty helped us solve them.

"This College, in training for Christian character, for a liberal arts background, and in practical work, has molded lives whose work and imprint have been felt the world around."

Special music for the occasion was provided by the King's Heralds Quartet of the Voice of Prophecy. The quartet sang on Friday night, and one of the former members, Elder John Thurber, now educational secretary of the Texas Conference, gave the sermon.

Other activities of the weekend included a sacred concert on Sabbath afternoon by the King's Heralds Quartet assisted by SMC's Adelpian Quartet. There were approximately 2000 persons present to hear the musical groups.

The College and the Alumni honored Mr. B. F. Summerour of Norcross, Ga., who as a member of SMC's Board of Trustees, of the Executive Committee and of the Committee of 100, has rendered invaluable service and financial support to SMC.

Chester H., '57, and Mary Jean Brown Damron, '53, write: "Presently we are very busy here in the development program of Mt. Klabat College. I am teaching a full class load in the Bible Department while acting as president of our college. At present, we are on a two-year program, but expecting to grow into a four-year college by 1970. This is the newest member of Seventh-day Adventist Colleges around the world. Our campus is located in a very lovely part of the North Celebes where we enjoy a lovely year-round climate along with delicious fruits and ample vegetables. We are happy in our work and find the peoples of Indonesia very loving and lovable."

Peter, '57, and Violet Starr Durichek, '55, have been at the Kellogg-Mookerjee High School for the past two years. Peter is principal. Quoting Peter: "We have one high school, 16 workers, 2 national ordained men, 3 overseas families and one doctor for a population of over 50 million. Our task is to train our youth to work for approximately 10 million Hindus and 40 million Muslims.

"Many are so poor that they can't even pay $2.00 a month for tuition. . . Our enrollment this year is 130 in all the grades. We had to turn away at least 50 for lack of funds. Many receive little or no help when they become Christians."

Glenn T. McColpin was voted vice-president and president elect of the Seventh-day Adventist Lawyers' Association which was organized on the La Sierra campus, Aug. 24-27. Glenn, his wife, the former Lois Marie Wood, '54, and their 19-month old adopted son live in Collegedale.

Fleming Gives Pointers On 'What SMC's Alumni Can Do'

By CHARLES FLEMING, JR.
General Manager, SMC

As I picked up a program for the weekend, I immediately turned to the schedule for this evening, for I was aware that I was to be on the program, but did not know exactly what area my scholarly and intellectual remarks were to cover.

I read this line several times, "What Her Alumni Can Do for SMC." It seems to me to assume several things—first of all that SMC might logically expect her alumni to do something for her and secondly that her alumni are competent to do something for her. And then I dwelt even longer on the second thought—there was a time when our college graduates were small in number, but the situation is fast changing—we are graduating over 150 seniors each year, and I am becoming convinced that the Alumni of SMC can do for their alma mater just about anything they make up their minds to do. And perhaps it is about time that they make up their minds to do something.

Now, I am sure that our alumni need to pray for this college—we need your prayers both students and staff, and we take it for granted that you are remembering us in your daily devotions.

We need your counsel; we need to know what you hear about SMC out in the field, so that we can weigh rumor and remarks with actual facts and determine therefrom our future paths. Your constructive criticism is always welcome.

Somehow when a topic like this is assigned "What Her Alumni Can Do For SMC," and the financial officer of the college is asked to speak on it, whoever assigned the topic had something definite in mind and felt confident that I would decipher the message, and I have.

Most of you, since you are college graduates, keep up with current events. I am sure many of you read the article in Time in June and one in a recent Business Week, setting forth the precarious situation of all colleges and universities that are not tax-supported, not just small church-related colleges but large, heavily endowed universities like Harvard, Princeton, and Dartmouth, stating that with the great explosion of knowledge to be poured on those enrolled, it was impossible to keep up financially.

We are aware of these problems as they apply to SMC; you are aware of the soaring cost of tuition, even though it is about 30 per cent of Harvard's tuition, and we have less than 10 per cent of the endowment per student enrolled than they have.

Income to a college has certain prescribed sources: 1. tuition and fees, 2. tax grants, 3. subsidies from sponsoring organizations, 4. endowments, 5. operating gifts, 6. support of alumni. We operate on two of these: tuition and fees, and a conference subsidy that amounts to approximately 7 per cent of a student's tuition or a little over 3 per cent of his total charges. We also have income from subsidies which might be construed as a yield on an investment of limited endowment funds.

We are rightly termed a peculiar people, we are peculiarly liberal with our church giving, giving way beyond the average gifts of Protestant church members, and we enjoy this. We give to the support of the ministry, for Sabbath School, for missions, for church buildings, for elementary schools, for academies.

But one thing that makes us peculiar is that, although we give so much more than other denominations as church members, we do so much less as college alumni than do alumni of other colleges. The thought confuses me, perhaps frustrates me, for I believe that the alumni of SDA colleges love their colleges as much as any graduates do. Somehow the thought that we should be liberal alumni as well as liberal church members has not registered. Evidently, SDA college administrators have done a miserably poor job in this area.

We know of graduates from Harvard, Ohio State, Oberlin, etc. who put a dollar a week in church and give tens of thousands to their alma mater. Why is this?

We have intelligent alumni, aware of the financial burden facing our college in trying to qualify as scholastically acceptable institutions of higher learning with a Christ-centered background, and I hear some of them say in one breath, "Don't take federal grants for your buildings or you'll be taken over by the government" and at the next alumni meeting they will argue that $5 per year dues is too large, we should make it $2 or $3. This situation prevails in all our denominational schools.

What can we do? Where do we start? For our colleges to grow and improve we must do things differently than we have in the past. We cannot keep up through tuition and conference subsidies. We show a profit of $250,000 per year in auxiliaries. This program we plan to expand. We have an industrial development committee, a finance committee, Committee of 100 members, and staff members to study ways and means of expanding our income.

You are aware of the Committee of 100 for SMC—100 dedicated laymen, supporting the college with their time, their ideas, and $500 per year. It has built our Physical Education Center. I have had letters from our colleges throughout North America asking about this Committee of 100. When I explain it, they all come back with the same answer, "It wouldn't work in our union. Our laity don't feel that strongly in favor of their college."

And they are right. The feeling of unity, camaraderie is different here in the South. I believe you alumni love your college more than do the alumni of other colleges. Perhaps we as college administrators have never adequately placed before you the need as alumni to support your college tangibly. Many of you help through your church, as board members, as Committee of 100 members, but not as alumni. Perhaps you may now direct your thinking toward the need of including SMC in your 1968 budget.

We plan to indoctrinate our Senior Class with the need before they leave each Spring. It is very possible, in my estimation, to come to the place where our Alumni instead of putting up a sign at the entrance to the campus, will be contributing $100,000 per year to the improvement of our educational program. This could be done today with $1.50 per week from our 4-year graduates.

And this is what comes into my mind when I read the topic, "What Her Alumni Can Do For SMC."

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

by sending $100 each year to the Association. Some may desire to become One Percenters by giving one per cent of their personal incomes annually. When Mr. Fleming spoke at the Annual Alumni Business Meeting on "What Her Alumni Could Do for SMC," he said that if each alumnus would give but $1.50 per week, the association would have over $100,000 each year to use in building up our college. Whatever plan you may choose to follow, the new officers join with the retiring ones in recommending that each alumnus donate at least $5 each year to the Association.

And now, though it is nearly a year away, I THANK you who are planning to attend the Homecoming of 1968. Would that it could be THE HOMECOMING to which our college and lives are dedicated.

FRANZ SPEAKS

Dr. Frank Knittel, academic dean, acting for the College's Board of Trustees, presented Mr. Summerour with a plaque. Dr. Dewitt Bowen, alumni president, gave Mrs. Summerour, an alumnus of the College, a bouquet of red roses to honor her for her years of work and loyalty to the College.

Honor classes for the Homecoming were the 25- and 10-year classes — 1942 and 1957.

New SMC entrance gate and sign which was made possible by alumni gifts.

Funds Received During Past Year Total $1,908.81

The SMC Alumni Association is attempting to institute a new era of activities by actively and thoroughly putting the programs of the college, be they spiritual, financial, or academic, before its members.

For instance, in the past, the alumni have not been solicited in an active, thorough way by the college, mainly because the Association has not been organized well enough to carry on an intensive campaign of any kind and, secondly, because the various administrations of the college have realized that the members were so young that many of its graduates were not in a financial position to support the college in the way in which they would like.

After all, the college has just now reached its 21st birthday, as far as being a senior college is concerned; therefore, most of the graduates have had neither the time nor the opportunity to get themselves established in a profession or business in such a way that they can help the college substantially.

The Alumni Association, under the direction of Dr. Dewitt Bowen this past year, and under Mr. Lynn Sauls this year, have inaugurated a complete new program of solicitation of the alumni for the various projects on the campus. They are hopeful that the program will accelerate and become contagious among the alumni around the world.

The funds to which gifts have been made in 1967 now stands as follows:

Sign Project Fund	$349.50
Worthy Student Fund	982.31
Library Expansion Fund	321.50
Operating Fund	166.50
General Expansion Fund	89.00

Adventures With Dr. Louis Ludington

Dr. Louis G. Ludington, '40, a member of the staff of Loma Linda University and Hospital, was recently involved in what was described as a "fortunate" automobile accident in Glendale, Calif.

A California woman suffered a "fatal" heart attack while driving, and her car swerved into opposing traffic and resulted in the "smash up" of three other vehicles, one being driven by Dr. Ludington.

The doctor immediately approached the woman's crumpled car and found her slumped out of sight behind the wheel. Discovering she had no pulse and was not breathing, he recognized that she had suffered a heart attack. Dr. Ludington began administering artificial respiration and external heart massage. Every time he would stop resuscitation, she would stop breathing.

Larry Mixon, '64 Wins First Prize For Oil Painting

Loren W. Mixon, '64, recently won first prize for one of his paintings in a contest held in the Mocksville, N.C. area. As a result, he was asked to exhibit his paintings at the public library where a reception was held to mark the opening of the one-man show.

Larry teaches art classes in eight of the public schools. He loves to paint landscapes, and this has given him the opportunity to tell the Bible story of creation.

In teaching the use of various colors, he stresses the symbols represented by each color, such as, white represents purity. This has given him the opportunity to give lessons in character building, and parents have expressed appreciation for what he has done for their children.
