The Library's top two health sciences databases are MEDLINE and CINAHL. We highly recommend them for nurses, allied health professionals, nurse educators, physicians and students who need to obtain scholarly information from the health sciences literature.

MEDLINE is the premier bibliographic database of the U.S. National Library of Medicine® (NLM) that contains more than 25 million references to journal articles in life sciences with a concentration on biomedicine. MEDLINE includes literature published from 1966 to present, taken from more than 5,200 journals in about 40 languages; about 60 languages for older journals. The subject scope of MEDLINE is biomedicine and health, broadly defined to encompass those areas of the life sciences, behavioral sciences, chemical sciences, and bioengineering needed by health professionals and others engaged in basic research and clinical care, public health, health policy development, or related educational activities. MEDLINE also covers life sciences vital to biomedical practitioners, researchers, and educators, including aspects of biology, environmental science, marine biology, plant and animal science as well as biophysics and chemistry. The Cumulative Index of Nursing and Allied Health Literature (CINAHL) provides indexing of over 5,400 nursing and allied health literature publications, with more than 6 million citations. The database covers a wide range of topics including nursing, biomedicine, health sciences librarianship, alternative/complementary medicine, consumer health and 17 allied health disciplines. In addition, CINAHL provides access to health care books, nursing dissertations, conference proceedings, standards of practice, audiovisuals, legal cases, clinical innovations, critical paths, research instruments and clinical trials.
