JAMES L. FULLER COLLECTION

McKee Library digitizes collection of 19th century documents

The James L. Fuller Collection of manuscripts from the 19th century have been digitized and are available on KnowledgeExchange@Southern, the university’s institutional repository. Included in the collection are personal letters, legal documents, and bills of sale for slaves. Although this is a small collection, its contents, especially the bills of sale, are historically significant and useful teaching tools for several academic departments.

This collection was only recently discovered because it had been erroneously grouped with the Thomas Memorial Collection in the 1970s. Upon closer inspection, it was made clear due to the inclusion of a note that the contents in that particular box were from a separate donor.

The library’s archival assistant, Abby Hansen, digitized, interpreted, and transcribed the collection materials. Detailed descriptions and document transcriptions are included with each manuscript’s photograph. The creation of a finding aid and further research into the collection’s provenance and history will be done in the coming months.

The collection can be viewed on KnowledgeExchange@Southern at knowledge.e.southern.edu/fullercollection.

Barefoot Heart: Stories of a Migrant Child

Written by Elva Treviño Hart
E184.M5 H365 1999

A vividly told autobiographical account of the life of a child growing up in a family of migrant farm workers. It brings to life the day-to-day existence of people facing the obstacles of working in the fields and raising a family in an environment that is frequently hostile to those who have little education and speak another language.
Hoovers D&B is a company and industry research database, organized into six modules: build a company list, browse news, find contacts, research industries, explore triggers, and analyze markets. It covers over 130 million global, public and private firms, with company and industry overviews, SWOT, financial, and analyst reports.

The “Building a Company List” module allows you to build a targeted list of companies using over 175 search and segmentation filters, providing an overview of the companies, with key contacts and triggers. The news module searches over 18,000 regional and international publications. In addition, you can build a contact list using 200 search and segmentation filters. Moreover, you can research industries by searching by name, code, source, or description. Included in the industry reports are summaries, news items, peer analysis, industry activities, analyst reports, market research reports, and RMA industry norms. Furthermore, you can monitor business events that represent selling opportunities and significant developments and analyze market forecasts and trends regionally and globally.
