Largest Class Graduates

Three days of graduation ceremonies at SMC ended with commencement exercises at 10:00 a.m., May 4. The principal speaker was Dr. William Loveless, pastor of the Loma Linda University Church, Loma Linda, California.

Elder Ellsworth S. Reile, president of the Carolina Conference had the baccalaureate sermon at the 11:00 o'clock hour, May 3.

Friday night at the college's consecration service, Dr. Josephine Griffin Benton, associate pastor of the Sligo Seventh-day Adventist Church in Washington, D. C., delivered the main address.

Dr. Benton is the first woman speaker for graduation at the school. She also is the first woman pastor to be so designated by the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

Dennis Parrish, who died in an automobile accident during spring vacation, was graduated posthumously and Cum Laude. His wife also was killed in the accident.

The nursing department had the largest number of graduates. Those completing the four-year course numbered 52 and the two-year course had 86. Mrs. Ina Longway, the new head of the nursing department, spoke at the Senior Pinning Service.

Other departments with large numbers of graduates were education and theology.

The senior class gift for 1975 was announced by President Robert Moore. Five IBM selectric typewriters will be given to the McKee Library for public use, and $750 will be donated to the student mission in Nicaragua for the purchase of machinery.

The graduates are as follows:

General Education Requirements Give Students More Options

Students will begin studying under a new set of general education requirements next school year according to Dr. Cyril Fitcher, academic dean. The primary advantage of the new program is the decrease in the total number of semester hours needed for graduation. Now 124 hours, instead of 128, will be needed for a bachelor's degree.

Students are also given greater flexibility under

SMC Explains Privacy Rights

What are an SMC's student's rights to privacy in regard to release of information on file for him in the admissions and records office? This is a question that has been raised since the passage of the Buckley Amendment entitled "Protection to the Rights of Privacy of Parents and Children."

According to this amendment to the General Education Provisions Act, directory information may be released to the public unless a student states objections to the release of certain items.

A recent clarification of the amendment defines directory information as the student's name, address, telephone, date and place of birth, major field, participation in recognized activities and sports, weight and height if a member of an athletic team, dates of attendance, degrees and awards, and the most recent previous educational agency or institution attended.

Students who do not want some items of information released have been given the opportunity to make their objections known. Any item of information which students wish to keep confidential will not be released to the public, according to Dr. Arno Kutzner, director of admissions and records.

Under the terms of the legislation on privacy, a student is entitled to access to his education records. He is welcome, therefore, to go to the office of admissions and records and see his academic record at any time. Letters of recommendation will not be shown to the student, however. Recommendations received before January 1, 1975, were given the assurance that they would be kept confidential, and are not covered by the act. Recommendations received after that time will be a part of the admissions function and will not be retained in the student's file after enrollment.

Accepted applicants do not have the right under the Buckley Amendment to see and challenge their letters of recommendation. Other information which cannot be made available to the students are their parents' confidential financial statements submitted to the college, and sensitive psychiatric and related records. They may, however, have a doctor of their choice review psychiatric records for them.

Telephoned requests for transcripts can no longer be accepted. A fee of $1.00 must be paid and the individual's account must be cleared before a transcript can be released. A number of colleges are now charging $2.00 per transcript, but SMC plans to hold the price to $1.00, since no billing for the fee will be involved.

It appears that Southern Missionary College is in compliance with the legislation on privacy, and it is the intention of the college administration to take whatever further action may be necessary to comply fully as additional clarifications are made to the law.

the new set of requirements. They may take up to 11 more hours of electives than had previously been possible.

Futcher points out that: "specific courses from each department that may apply on the general education program have been selected by each department involved, in consultation with the academic dean and have been approved by the curriculum committee."

The general education classes must be selected from five areas, which will attempt to give the student a broader perspective in his education. These five areas are: man's God, man's culture, man's environment, man's communication needs, and man's labor and recreation.

Futcher pointed out, however, that the program has some weaknesses, especially in the area of man's environment. But he added that the Curriculum Committee is currently studying the problems in the hope of weeding out some of the flaws.

Student Missionaries

Eighteen students of Southern Missionary College will spend the summer in the mission field, according to Dr. Rudolf Aussner, student missionary sponsor.

Three students will be in Korea. They are Mara-Lea Feist, English major from Bradenton, Florida; Carol Pape, elementary education major from Dayton, Ohio; and Bette Jayne Wagner, physical education major from Wescosville, Pennsylvania.

Also three students will be going to Japan. They are Bob Gadd, accounting major from Knoxville, Tennessee; Paul LaHue; and Deborah Webb, social work major from Miami, Florida.

Rick Bonney, theology major from Miami, Florida, and Gregory Goodchild, psychology major from Munising, Michigan, will be student missionaries in Honduras.

Kirk King, theology major from Greeneville, Tennessee, and Russell Cooper, religion major from Collegedale, will spend the summer in Africa.

David Kay, religion major from Asheville, North Carolina, will be in Puerto Rica.

Nursing Departments Merge; Mrs. Ina Longway New Head

Two of the largest academic departments of Southern Missionary College will merge into one with several changes starting this fall, according to Dr. Cyril Futcher, academic dean.

The nursing program, which had an enrollment this past year of 450, included both the associate of science and baccalaureate degrees. These two programs were separate but as of this fall they will join and all nursing students will be in one department.

Mrs. Ina Longway, currently teaching in the School of Nursing at Loma Linda University, will head the new program. Mrs. Longway has a B.S. degree in nursing from San Jose State College; an M.S. degree from Loma Linda University; and is completing work on a doctorate at the University of California at Riverside.

Under the new program, all nursing students will be able to obtain an A.S. degree and sit for State Board Examination after two years. At that point the program provides for all to continue for another two years to obtain advanced training and receive a B.S. degree in nursing. Those who decide not to continue for this advanced work will nevertheless be able to enter the nursing profession as qualified registered nurses.

"There is a great demand for more advanced nurses today, and that is what we want to help fill," says Futcher. "The four-year program offers upper division sciences and emphasis on leadership in public health, medical, surgical and psychiatric nursing. We expect the new program to influence more graduates toward a B.S. degree, which is what we want to see."

The new program will allow four-year students ten or twelve semester hours in which to specialize in areas of their choice.

A new freshman class will start each semester with 80 accepted into clinical nursing. Limits in acceptances are needed due to lack of availability of staff and facilities. Futcher states that the 1975 fall class is completely filled and only a few spots remain for the 1975-76 spring semester. So any student who is interested should apply immediately.

Seven students will be at the mission project in Nicaragua. They are: Miguel Castillo, industrial education major from Oxnard, California; Donna Donesky, religion major from Candler, North Carolina; Tommy Hall, construction technology major from Dayton, Ohio; Jean Herman, elementary education major from Miramar, Florida; Steve Hanson, from Winter Park, Florida; Kevin Lipscomb, construction technology major from Laurel, Maryland; and Terry Turner, theology major from Athens, Tennessee.

Dr. Arno Kutzner Appointed Institutional Research Director

Dr. Arno Kutzner, director of admissions and records of Southern Missionary College, has been given the additional responsibility of Institutional Research Director, according to Dr. Frank Knittel, SMC's president.

This position involves the formal development and utilization of computer information germane to any type of institutional research, both academic and fiscal.

Knittel says that Kutzner in his new position will "work closely with the Seventh-day Adventist General Conference Board of Higher Education in the production of all types of computerized information. In this way, we have knowledge not only on our own operations, but we also have a basis of comparing ourselves to other SDA colleges."

Florida School Helps Nicaragua

Arthur Douglas Black, '72, and six of his elementary school students of the Eustis, Florida Seventh-day Adventist Church School raised $342.15 for the Southern Missionary College student mission project in Nicaragua, Central America.

As a former SMC student, Black kept up his interest in the program after he graduated and involved his students in it this year.

Dr. R. R. Aussner, sponsor of the project at SMC, gratefully accepted the check and said it would be used to purchase badly needed medical equipment for the student-manned mission station.
