SOUTHERN

GIVING

Of Bones and Beliefs

Riding a mule down into the Grand Canyon . . . tramping half way up a mountain in Yellowstone to see a petrified tree . . . trekking through Wyoming wilderness for a look at dinosaur bones as large as trees. What I did this summer was not what the typical college president does in a typical year.

On July 4 and in the next 11 days I had the unusual opportunity to participate in a field tour conducted by the Geoscience Research Institute. This is a small group of resident scientists working under the General Conference umbrella. Their tours share with church educators and administrators visible data supporting the Biblical creation account in contrast with alternate theories of origins.

I found this to be an exciting, faith-building experience. Our eyes and our ears worked from early morning until late at night, assimilating with purpose not only the beauty and drama of natural landmarks but also vast quantities of impressive data.

The great key to resolving conflict between creationism and evolution lies in the Genesis flood and the consequences of this worldwide catastrophe. As I saw with my own eyes multiplied evidences of flood catastrophe upon God's creation, I became convinced that believing evolution requires more credulity, a longer leap of faith if you please, than does believing the creation story given us by the only One who was there.

I found it confirming to learn that Seventh-day Adventist scientists, some of the very ones who led our 30-guest tour group, are doing scientific research that is recognized in the secular, scientific world as valid. Their careful work is requiring other scientists to modify and realign their own thinking.

From this trek I came back a stronger creationist than ever. One of our main goals here at Southern College is to nurture the faith-building process for the young people of our church. The bedrock of God's Word provides a sure foundation for that structure of belief.

FTE Enrollment Continues Upward Curve

In line with hopes but contrary to expectations, Southern College enrollment is up again for the fifth year running.

Though actual head count at 1,532 for 1991-92 is down by two from last year, the most significant figure when it comes to financial vigor—full time equivalency—reached 1,297. This is 8 above last year's official figure and the highest FTE since 1982.

Full-time equivalency is figured by dividing the number of hours for which students are enrolled by 15.5, the number of hours considered to be a full-time load.

"The registration turnout was a very, very pleasant surprise," said Dr. Ronald Barrow, vice president for admissions. He went on to explain that Southern Union academies graduated 50 fewer seniors than in the previous year. The number of beginning freshmen from Southern Union academies, however, fell only by 26.

Last spring's graduating class here at Southern was unusually large—314 versus 271 the previous spring—a fact that makes this fall's enrollment all the more remarkable.

Through the entire summer, acceptances lagged behind the number accepted at the same point last year.

The tentative budget, presented to the Board of Trustees last February, was built on an average projected FTE enrollment for the two semesters of 1,182.

"What this means is that despite additional staff hired since the preliminary budget, the process to revise the budget (as is done each fall) will be much easier," says Dale Bidwell, vice president for finance.

Returning students number 912. An additional 60 came back after being away a year or more. New students include 367 from academies, high schools, or GED. The balance represents 134 transfer students and 59 special students.

Close to two-thirds of the student body is from the Southern Union. Four percent claim residence outside the United States, and half of those (36 students) are from Canada. Two students from Russia and two from China contribute to the cultural milieu.

What are students studying?

"Most departments enrolled about the same number of majors as last year," said Mary Elam, associate vice president for academic administration. Chemistry and math are up and biology and physics remained stable.

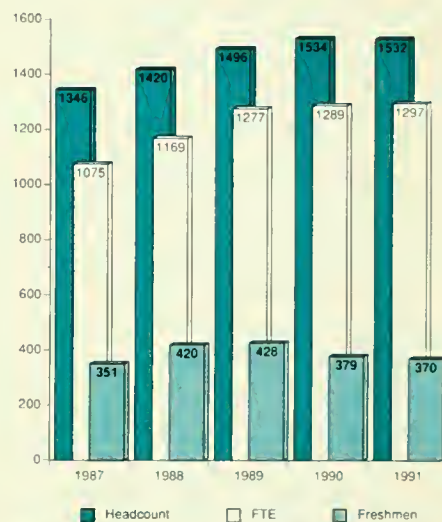

Service occupations generally show some growth. For example, the number of students preparing to teach on the elementary level-103—is up by 14. At 409, the number choosing nursing for their major is up by 38. A religion major is the choice of 115, up by 8 students. The wellness management major, introduced in last year's Catalog, picked up another 9 students to make a total of 29 in that major field.

Enrollment in North America's 13 Adventist colleges and universities totaled 18,325 in December 1990, with another 52,214 in a thousand elementary schools and 14,156 in one hundred secondary schools.

"McDonald's."

Ben's answer baffles me. Ben Chon, a senior religion major at Southern, is perhaps the most articulate Korean I have met.

My question had been, "What started you thinking about working in the USSR this past summer?"

"... McDonald's?"

"Yes. I saw in the newspaper that Big Macs were doing very well over there. Then why not English language schools? ... Student missionaries? ... Sometimes God can even use a hamburger. That's how I got the idea."

Last year Ben Chon felt a burden to inspire youth with a vision for missionary work. "Young people have such great potential and often don't realize it."

So what did he do? "I prayed about it and God answered my prayer," Ben answered simply.

One of his teachers, Dr. Leo Van Dolson, helped him get in touch with Robert Spangler, evangelism consultant for the Soviet Division of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. Through him, arrangements were made for Ben to go to Tashkent for one week in May to prepare for a series of evangelistic meetings. Then he came back to the U.S. and recruited seven others for the Tashkent adventure: Mike Kim, another religion major from Southern College; a young man from California; a Cornell-educated computer analyst from Boston; a dental lab technician; a retired minister; and a medical doctor from South Korea. Pastor Lynn Martell of the North American Division Church Ministries Department got so excited about the project that he changed his schedule to join the group. Ben also completed his self-appointed task of raising the $10,000 needed for the project, some 40 percent from Korean Adventists and the rest from many other friends and sources.

The six-week Tashkent missionary journey extended from June 12 to July 22. It began with a 10-day health seminar, a week off, and then three weeks of evangelistic meetings.

Words flew. Health talks were translated from Korean to Russian. Pastor Martell's sermons were translated from English to Russian. Russian responses were translated to English and Korean.

Ben speaks warmly of the welcome the group received. "Our hosts were so hospitable and kind, such innocent people."

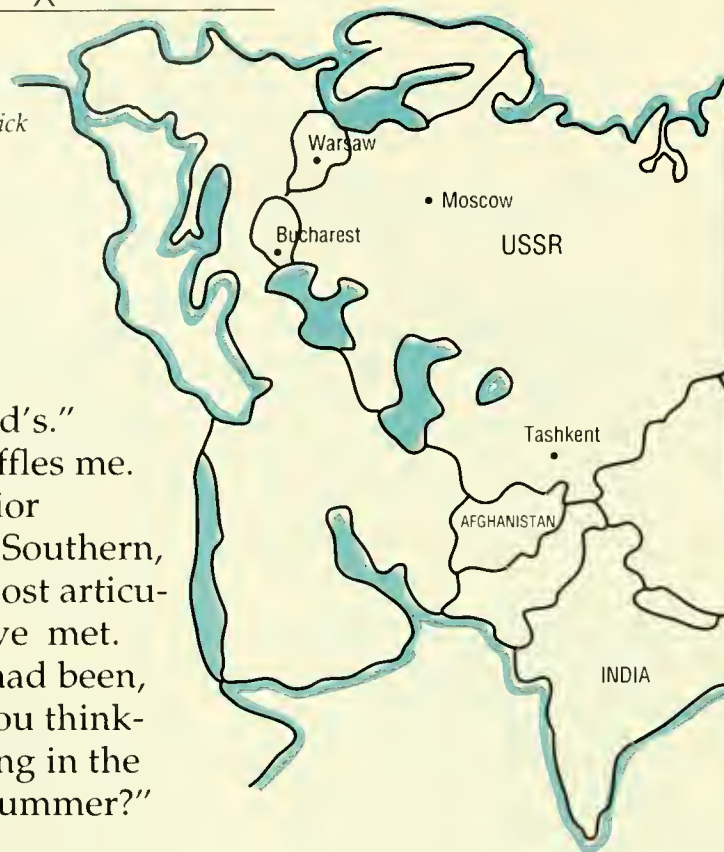

Yet it was not all roses. When the seminar began, their faith expected a packed hall. But the first day only 100 people showed up. They were to learn that seventy years of communism had depleted creative thinking. People waited to be told every little detail before daring to do. Despite Ben's preparatory visit and an Adventist church in Tashkent with 120 Russian members, no organization had taken place for this kind of campaign—no ushers, no platform chairmen. Posters had been prepared just the day before the seminar began. With guidance, the people were willing to do anything, and soon attendance reached about 220.

Dr. Byung Cho provided medical treatment daily, prior to his lectures, combining personal ministry with public ministry, an approach that once again confirmed the dynamic power of medical work as an entering wedge to people's hearts. Before his seminar ended, Cho asked those who wanted to follow God and start a new life to write down their names and addresses, and 101 responded.

Then Ben told me of the translator miracle: Sophia Constantine, a Korean, born in China, and fluent in three languages.

When Ben first visited Tashkent (a city with 300,000 Russian-speaking Koreans, plus some two million other residents), he realized the evangelism team would need a capable Christian translator. So he prayed. He visited the Presbyterian church on his scouting trip, and there observed a young lady translating the minister's sermon. But he did not meet her nor have occasion to invite her to the meeting he was conducting in the Adventist church that evening. Yet, mysteriously, she was there. Later he learned the rest of the story.

How God Used a Ha burger

The night before, Sophia dreamed she saw an American missionary preaching in English. Though she did not know English, she understood everything he was saying. When she awoke she was puzzled. That morning she got a call from an Adventist friend, Ruba, inviting her to come and hear an American missionary who was visiting. Afterwards, she accepted the invitation to translate for the meetings, and at the end of the six weeks, she was "translated" into the Adventist Church by baptism. For three years Ruba had been trying to lead Sophia to the Adventist church, and the time had come. God sent a dream to prepare the way.

A Korean boy named Slavan (meaning "Praise") attended the meetings faithfully. He became convinced that the Bible is truth, that he must believe in God. He came and told Ben that he wanted to be baptized, but his college entrance exam was scheduled for the same Sabbath. Ben replied that this was a great chance to experience the power of God as he started the Christian life.

"Let's pray, because it is God's will for you to be baptized and He is able to change the date of the exam,"

Ben told him. They knelt together. In fact, Ben prayed for him for a whole week. Friday came, and Slavan returned with good news: The exam date had been changed from Sabbath to the following Friday!

Another miracle occurred in the life of one of the Americans. Mark Lee, the Californian, was with the group through grace. In his rebellious high school years he had gotten into the drug scene, much to the sorrow of his Seventh-day Adventist family. Now he was in the recovery process after hospitalization to kick cocaine.

Last spring Mark's mother learned about the Tashkent trip and saw it as an opportunity for her son to regain his faith. Knowing the risks, but knowing the risk God has taken for all of humanity, Ben couldn't refuse her request.

Mark worked with the young people in Tashkent and taught one class in the experimental English language school held for 20 students for one month. On the plane returning home, Ben asked Mark what he had learned from the experience.

"Frankly speaking, I had no religion when I went to Tashkent, but now I know there is a God and He hears my prayers," Mark told him. This is precisely the kind of change that Ben hoped to see in the lives of young people. Mark had discovered a live experience with God and felt for himself the joy of service.

The last miracle that Ben told me about was a personal one. Before he departed from Tashkent, the union conference president and the local conference president invited Ben back to work as an evangelist after he graduates next spring. They promised him and his wife, Mi Cha, a place to live and transportation to use in his work.

The miracle is all the more dramatic, Ben believes, because of where he's coming from. Just 11 years ago he used to spend all night at night clubs. "God picked me, a maggot, a worm, and used me to open the door, to open the Gospel to the Koreans in the USSR. His grace is marvelous and mighty," says Ben.

Among the 104 baptized in Tashkent in July at the end of the meetings were five Koreans, the first Adventist Koreans in the Soviet Union to Ben's knowledge. The new Adventist Christians include 23 young people.

The story has just begun.

And in Eastern Europe

Meanwhile, last summer in Eastern Europe, Professors Ron Springett and Leon Mashchak were helping train young ministers at the SDA seminary near Warsaw, Poland. A year ago Dr. Doug Bennett spent six weeks there. Seeing an urgent need, he came home and raised $50,000 for a water/sewer system for the seminary. The government was on the verge of closing the school when the gift arrived.

Dr. Bennett is scheduled to go to Bucharest next May to assist the seminary in Romania. Prior to the revolution, the school averaged three students a year. Last year it had 50 students and expected 35 more this fall. Of 825 churches there, 300 of them are less than a year old.

Barbara Bush Invited for Graduation

Hundreds of students registering for the fall semester took an extra moment to pen a personal invitation to the First Lady on a long banner. Several weeks earlier, President Don Sahly wrote to Barbara Bush inviting her to speak for the Centennial Commencement. Her scheduling director responded that her official schedule is arranged only a few weeks in advance, and "we will be in touch with you closer to the date of your event."

Students encouraged her visit with notes of warmth, appreciation of Mrs. Bush's priorities and expressions of Southern hospitality. French, Korean, Chinese, Spanish, and Russian notes were included.

NPR's Robert Siegel To Be Guest of WSMC

A double birthday celebration—the 30th anniversary of WSMC FM90.5, and the 20th anniversary of National Public Radio's award-winning newsmagazine, All Things Considered—will bring NPR's Robert Siegel to Chattanooga on Thursday, October 24.

Listeners to the radio station on Southern's campus, serving Chattanooga as its only classical music station, are invited to the celebration, beginning at 7:30 p.m. The event is being hosted at the Hunter Museum of Art, 10 Bluff View, on the south bank of the Tennessee River in Chattanooga. Alumni and other friends of the college are invited free of charge, as are listeners unacquainted with Southern College.

Robert Siegel is "the man who broke the news to NPR listeners around the world that the Persian Gulf War had started."

Giving for Life

The first of several blood drives at Southern College took place during CABL (Collegiate Adventists for Better Living) week in September. The goal was to draw 300 pints of the life-saving fluid. Blood Assurance staff will return to the campus in mid-November. The nonprofit organization serves seven counties in Tennessee and Georgia, and is the sole supplier of blood to hospitals in the region.

'Book of the Century' To Be Released in May

A Century of Challenge—The Story of Southern College is scheduled for release in May 1992.

This all-new centennial book coincides with the celebration of the college centennial in 1992.

The 308-page volume is packed with photographs. Two years of research, design, and plans are already invested in the goal of providing alumni and other friends of the college a front-seat look at the college's remarkable history.

Author Dennis Pettibone, professor of history at Southern, has interviewed scores of people and reviewed thousands of documents.

"He spares no detail as he recounts the struggles and victories of the dedicated men, women, and students throughout the last century," says Vinita Sauder, chair of the publication committee and designer of the book.

Dr. Barbara Ruf, retired professor of English, is the book's editor. Lisa Springett, college archivist, along with Russ Miller, current history and English major, are in charge of picture collection, footnoting, and indexing.

Others on the publication committee are Chick Fleming, former business manager, who writes a foreword in the book; Dr. Ben McArthur, History Department chairman; Ruth Jacobs, long-time member of the Alumni Council; and Dr. Jim Ashlock, director of alumni and college relations.

Until January 1, 1992, orders are being taken at special pre-publication prices: a numbered, limited leatherbound edition for $200, and a hardbound, linen edition for $34.95. Higher prices will prevail after January 1.

Credit card orders may be called in to 1-800-277-7273.

Nursing Students Achieve Perfect Passing Rate on Boards

The Department of Nursing came up with its own special way of celebrating Southern's 100 years: a 100 percent passing rate on State Boards taken last spring.

Results just in from the nine states in which students took the 8-hour examination indicate that every one of the 83 students from Southern passed on the first attempt. This included 36 students from the Orlando campus. The state of Florida had an overall passing rate of 90 percent. Nationwide, the rate is 91.

"It's a very happy day," said Katie Lamb, chair of the department.

"The credit goes to the students and faculty," Mrs. Lamb stated. Teachers work with students not only in groups but one to one.

"Students who go to other schools, then transfer into ours, talk about our caring faculty," she said. "Sometimes it's difficult to toe the line but our faculty are able to do that with a caring attitude."

Southern College nursing students sit for the examination after they earn their A.S. degree, normally after two years of study. They find themselves among many students who have completed a 3-year diploma program or a 4-year bachelor's degree program.

Tennessee examiners travel to Nashville for the four-segment test.

Successful Field School Held in Tampa

"The best one so far." This is the Religion Department's analysis of the field school held in Tampa this summer.

Ten students enrolled in the summer's evangelism classes and traveled to Florida to participate in a full-scale evangelistic series. Attendance reached 1200.

Dr. Derek Morris and Dr. Doug Bennett from Southern shared teaching responsibilities with Evangelist Ron Halvorsen, director of church growth and evangelism for the Southern Union Conference. Southern's Department of Religion and the Union provide joint direction for this segment of professional training.

When the series ended August 17, 85 new members had joined the Adventist Church in Tampa. Another 15 have been baptized since.

Next summer's field school is scheduled for Chattanooga, less than twenty miles from the Collegedale campus.

Field schools offer six hours of academic credit in public and personal evangelism. Church ministry majors consider it an invaluable experience.

Triathletes Test Both Mind and Body

Coming in first in the open women's team division at the 7th Annual Southern College Triathlon was this trio: Holly Moores, Angela Bullock, and Heather Williams. This year's event was held at Cohutta Springs Ranch on Sunday, September 8. The 70 participants included 37 individual triathletes and 11 relay teams of three people each. In addition to college students, teams came from Collegedale Academy and Mount Pisgah Academy. Many competitors were from the Chattanooga community. The fastest individual triathlete among the students was Shawn Sercoss. The event began with a half-mile swim, followed by an 18-mile bike race and a 4-mile run.

Δ Dawn (Lindquist) Holbrook, '82, is new to the Nursing Department this fall. She is instructing in the area of pediatrics and critical care. Her husband, Tim, is employed in the college Motor Pool. They have a son, John, 5.

Δ Elsworth Hetke has joined the administrative faculty as personnel director and student labor coordinator. His responsibilities include finding jobs for students, monitoring their labor, and keeping employee handbooks updated. A church administrator in India for 23 years, he comes now from the presidency of the British Columbia Conference. His wife, Eleanor, is a nurse. They have two sons, Theodore and Eric, and a daughter, Sukie, 13.

Δ Leona Gulley received her doctorate in counseling from Vanderbilt University this past summer. Her thesis dealt with "The Etiology of Anorexia Nervosa: The Δ To fortify development of communication skills, Dr. Ann Clark is directing a writing program that serves both students and teachers. By advising students intimidated by major writing assignments, and by working with their teachers, she hopes to sharpen their tools of communication. Southern requires three writing-emphasis classes for a bachelor's degree.

Δ Sterling Sigsworth, a recent Ph.D. graduate of Pennsylvania

State, joined the Chemistry Department this fall. His emphasis is physical chemistry and his doctoral thesis dealt with the kinetics of metal ion reactions in the gas phase.

Δ Mark Bresee, '80, has been invited to join the Religion Department faculty full time beginning in January. The former pastor of the First SDA Church in Chattanooga, he is working on his doctor of ministry degree from Andrews University and teaching part time this semester. He and his wife, Sharon (Gulley), '81, have two children, Andrew, 3; and Alicia, about one year.

Δ Honorary titles have been awarded to two long-time employees, now retired. William H. Taylor, administrator emeritus, came to the college in 1958 as dean of students and director of public relations. His three decades of service also included teaching, alumni, and development responsibilities. Robert Merchant, treasurer emeritus, served the college as treasurer for 30 years. Active as a Student Association adviser, he also served on the Film Preview committee for several years.

Δ Paul Smith, Jr., is now assistant to the vice president for development. He comes from trust services and stewardship responsibilities in the New Jersey Conference. He will be assisting friends of the college who are interested in giving to the college through a will or trust, and will also be interfacing with the Committee of 100. He and his wife, Lynda (Christiansen), have sons Nathanael, 9, and Jeremiah, 6.

Δ Herbert Coolidge, '65, teaches accounting and tax classes in the Department of Business. Dr. Coolidge moved from Hendersonville, N.C., where he was most recently a financial consultant for Merrill Lynch. He and his wife, Carolyn (Williams), have two children.

Δ Additional individuals joining the faculty this year include Donna Roberts in the Department of Nursing on the Collegedale campus, and Delores Lambert and Netta Brown in the Department of Nursing on the Orlando Center campus.

CARE Leaders Initiate Active Program

By the end of the first full week of classes CARE (Collegiate Adventists Reaching Everyone) was off the starting block and into action. Collegiate Commitment Weekend on September 7 provided the opportunity for students to become familiar with service and Christian fellowship options and to make their initial choices among the many programs open to student participation. CARE leaders pictured above are, from left: Troy Fitzgerald, Campus Ministries; Sherrie Norton, secretary in the Chaplain's Office; Jeff Gang, assistant chaplain; Rick Mann, director of Destiny Drama Company; Pastor Ken Rogers, chaplain; Jon Steen, director of CABL (Collegiate Adventists for Better Living); and Shea Bledsoe, director of Student Missions.

Thank You . . .

For one hundred years this Tennessee school has grown and borne fruit because of a long list of individuals and organizations who have shared their resources to support its mission and programs. The following list of recent donors is cumulative and includes those who have given $250 or more within the past three fiscal years (between July 1, 1988, and May 31, 1990). Patrons gave in the most recent fiscal year.

Music Planned as Focus at Alumni Founders' Day

Founders' Day and Southern's centennial go together like peaches and cream.

To start off this year's Alumni Homecoming, on Friday, October 25, the So-Ju-Conians will again sponsor the traditional Founders' Day activities.

"The highlight of the day will be the honoring of the centennial birthday of former professor of music, Harold Amadeus Miller, born in 1891," predicts Edythe S. Cothren, chairperson for the day.

Professor Miller taught at Southern Junior College for 15 years during the 1930s and 1940s.

"Among those participating in the celebration will be Dr. Harold Amadeus Miller, Jr., his daughter Susan Evans, and her two daughters; Dr. Elsie Landon Buck, '41, who was a graduate in keyboard under Professor Miller; Marilyn Dillow Cotton, and Don Crook," said Dr. Cothren.

Others coming include Margarita Dietel Merriman, a music teacher here in the '50s; and Dr. John T. Hamilton, whose father was college president in the mid '20s. All former students of the Miller years will be special guests.

The So-Ju-Conians will honor all former members of the first women's dormitory club, the Joshi Jotatsu Kai, 1923-1943, at 11:45 on Friday at a women's luncheon. All women in attendance at homecoming are invited.

Founders' Day activities will end with the traditional box supper on Friday evening. Special guests at that time will be the Durichek/Nicaragua Mission personnel, and the usual honor classes.

"Another special feature of the weekend celebration will be the presentation of a beautiful Hammond organ, given in memory of two former alumni: Dr. Fuller Whitman and Dr. Ross Stromberg," said Dr. Cothren.

A memorial concert of flute and organ music will be given by Dr. Lilya Wagner. This service will take place on Sabbath afternoon in the Lynn Wood Hall chapel.
