PAVING THE WAY AND SURFING THE WEB

Response to the "Pave the Way" project for the Hickman Science Center is fantastic! Some are having their own names inscribed on a paving brick. Others are honoring family and/or friends. The appeal is bringing a universal response from all ages. The class of 1996 bought a large brick, and we've heard from members of most other classes.

The honor walk promises to be an extremely popular spot on campus year round. Students and visitors alike will be reminded of those who have made Southern what it is.

If you haven't already sent your order for a brick in this exciting project, please do so.

It's not too late to call the Alumni Office at 423-238-2839 if you need an order blank.

Two new computer workstations are now in use by students wishing to send and receive electronic messages or to surf the World Wide Web to obtain information from this rapidly expanding network.

Parents of enrolled students generously gave the money for these workstations. The new stations include Internet hookup, equipment, desk, and security devices. Located in the main hallway outside Information Services, they receive almost constant use during the day.

Uses range from writing a Student Missionary to exploring job openings through WWW.

Thank you to the parents who gave to help provide these significant experiences for the upgrading of our students' lives.

99 YEARS AND 1000s OF MILES

by Scott Guptill

It was a small college and everyone knew each other.

Through her physics teacher she met Ivan Lawrence. Shortly after they were married, Ivan was killed when his truck, loaded with lumber, crashed on Signal Mountain. While still grieving, she got a call to teach at a mission school in India. She says, "I moved to India to try to get over my sorrow, but, you know, you never do."

In spite of it all, she stayed eight years and became a great asset to Vincent Hill School. "Those were wonderful days," says Allen. "The mountains around the school were so beautiful." She ended up spending seven more years at various missions around India.

During her furlough in 1950, she decided to get her master's degree in education at Peabody College. It wasn't long before she began soliciting books to take back to India for yet another "tour of duty." She was instrumental in establishing the library at Spicer College in India. With her new degree in education, she taught many a student how to be a capable teacher.

In 1960 Allen went to Bangkok but had to return (against her will, she insists) because she was very ill. Once she was well enough, she returned to Bangkok for another four years. After many years of service, her mission days overseas were coming to an end and she moved to Meister Hills near Deer Lodge, Tenn.

Rose did find love again at 73. (It is never too late for love.) She married a long-time friend who was now a widower, Leonard Allen. They moved to California and then to Florida and spent nine happy years of marriage together.

When he died she returned to her hometown of Cleveland, Tenn. She is now living in the home of her niece and looking forward to her 100th birthday next January.

About overseas service she says, "If I were able, I'd go again tomorrow."

Scott Guptill was taking a feature article class from Dr. Lynn Sauls when he wrote this. Photography is another of his interests. His missionary parents currently live in Singapore.

Ninety-nine years and thousands of miles later, Rose Meister Allen is back nearly where she started: the Chattanooga area. A 1921 graduate of what is now Southern College, she is the oldest known graduate. Many of those 99 years were lived on the other side of the globe, as a frontier missionary to India and Thailand.

Rose Meister was born in Wisconsin on January 20, 1897. In 1900 her Methodist farming family packed up their belongings, hired a boxcar, and rode the train first class all the way to Chattanooga, then settled on a dairy farm near Cleveland.

One day her father was on his way back from delivering milk to Chattanooga when he saw a tent. "Well, not a lot went on in Cleveland back then," says Allen, "and he was attracted to the music." As he approached, someone invited him to the meeting.

That night all nine family members filed in and sat on the front row. Soon four families, including hers, were baptized in a creek at the Meister farm and joined the Seventh-day Adventist Church. "All four families are all still in the truth," says Allen.

Rose's life changed. She started going to church school. She didn't go very far, because the teacher boarded right in her home.

She continued her education at Southern Junior College and remembers living in the women's dormitory while it was still being built. 1918, it was. (The girls did much of the lathing and lumber-measuring themselves. The dorm was located between the present Garden of Prayer and Lynn Wood Hall.) Before that, it was tents and outhouses. "If you stood up, you could see people coming and going," says Allen. In fact, she remembers one bold student who stood up in her humble stall and was mortified to see the college president walk by. "Well, there was nothing the girl could do except say Hello, so that's what she did."

Southern had an agricultural farm. Everyone worked. Hay and grain was raised for over a dozen mules and horses and 50 cows. In 1920 a 16-acre peach orchard eventually yielding as many as 3000 bushels was set out, near where Collegedale Academy now is. The boys worked on the farm and Rose helped the girls can beans and peaches, among other things.

Allen remembers graduating in the newly completed barn. Bales of hay were seats for many. One could hear cowbells in the background and smell familiar barnyard scents. The motto her class of five chose? "Where Thou callest."

WHERE'D ALL THE WATER GO

by Christina Hogan

THREE GALLONS OF WATER AND A CHIMNEY BRICK

It was a hot day in the summer of '94, and the guards at Walden Pond weren't going to let Dr. Wilma McClarty, laden with three one-gallon jugs, into the park.

"That's what they thought," she says with a mischievous smile to her Survey of American Literature class. She and her husband, Jack, had driven to Walden Pond straight from Southern.

"It's 1,062 miles," she says in a way that makes her class want to scribble down the fact. Dr. McClarty has made the pilgrimage to Walden Pond five or six times. Each time Walden Pond decreases by three gallons. And she wasn't about to leave this time without three more gallons.

So she had accomplice Jack drive her around to the other entrance. The guard didn't look twice as she walked on by with her gallon jugs. Jack even took pictures documenting the moment so her class will believe the water is authentic.

"Now before you seal the lid, make sure you dip your finger in the water like this. I got it at great personal risk," she says as she hands out vials of authentic Walden Pond water to all the students. Each label reads, "From Dr. Wilma King McClarty and Henry David Thoreau."

But Dr. McClarty isn't done yet. In great ceremonial manner, she excitedly unwraps a plastic-covered item. It is a chimney brick with mortar still on it from Thoreau's cabin. Jack found it while digging in the dirt, and there's a picture to prove that, too.

"You can come up and touch it if you like," she offers. "Now there's only 999 left."

She keeps a close eye on the most-prized item in her collection as students timidly run their hands across the brick.

THE "INTERVIEW"

At 8:00 Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, Dr. McClarty comes to class, bubbling with energy and enthusiasm. She usually has something "authentic" to share—bark, twigs, rocks, or maybe an autographed book.

She has fascinated me for a long time, and when I discovered her passion for collecting literary memorabilia, I decided to find out just how extensive her collection is.

Monday, 9:30 a.m. I have an appointment with Dr. McClarty. She's going to give me a glimpse of her memorabilia showcase. I'm prepared. I have my list of questions written out neatly and in logical order. No problem.

"I'm really interested in your collection of American lit memorabilia," I say. "How extensive is it?"

The words are barely out of my mouth before she grabs a blank sheet of paper and a pen and begins scribbling furiously. Dr. McClarty does nothing slowly.

"OK, we'll make this Roman numeral one," she says, jotting something down.

"Next is sources: Jack, my students, my own trips . . . Roman numeral three would be types of collections: 700 magnets, music boxes, gnomes/wood spirit carvings, and then literary memorabilia." I suddenly realize that I am no longer in control of this interview.

But I have no desire to interrupt Dr. McClarty. In fact, I'm finding this to be much more interesting than I had imagined. So I sit back and let her finish her outline.

"You can do whatever you want with it," she says, still writing. She then breaks down literary memorabilia into sub-categories. Water, bricks/stones, plants/dirt/trees, and last, "commercially produced" collectibles such as her "zillions of postcards."

THE COLLECTION

With the rough draft of her outline now complete, Dr. McClarty takes me over to her showcase. Through the glass I see pieces of bark, bottles of water, some rocks and twigs, etc. Each item is identified according to its literary or historical significance.

One by one she removes the treasures she has collected over 15 years.

"You might want to write these down," she tells me. I do.

And that's just the beginning of her collection.

Maybe collecting items such as twigs, rocks, and water doesn't make a lot of sense to some people, but to Dr. Wilma McClarty her treasures possess deep significance.

"They provide a sense of continuity. They were there when [the authors] were there. They are visible connections to the past," she explains.

MORE THAN ROCKS AND TWIGS

But besides gathering significant items from nature, she also collects signed books. Her husband started her on that collection with an Edna St. Vincent Millay book which he found after two years of hunting. Now Dr. McClarty has 80 autographed books. Her most valued signature is that of Robert Frost.

Dr. McClarty is quick to point out that she doesn't just collect literary memorabilia. She has a pen used by Joe DiMaggio to sign autographs. She also collects historical treasures, especially those from the Civil War.

She travels extensively. From Alaska, where Robert Service lived, to Key West, home of Hemingway, if it has literary significance, she has been there. Her favorite place is Concord, Mass., "where history and literature merge."

Besides instilling the love of American literature in her students, Dr. McClarty ties religion into her classes.

"The Bible is the greatest story ever told. You can't understand Western thought without understanding the Bible," she says. "It was the basis for our country, and I tie it in whenever I can."

As I leave her office, I have an even deeper respect for Dr. Wilma McClarty and for the way she makes literature come alive.

Years from now I probably will have forgotten all the symbolism of Melville's Bartleby, but I will never forget Dr. Wilma McClarty.

And if Walden Pond ever goes dry, I'll know where all the water went. •

Christina Hogan was enrolled in Magazine and Feature Article Writing at the time she wrote this story. This past school year she was the student newswriter in the Publications/Media Relations Office, and this coming year she will co-edit the Southern Accent. A senior, her home is in Albany, Ga.

THE COLLECTION

- bark and dirt from T. S. Eliot's home.
- a pen used by Eudora Welty to sign autographs.
- water from the Bay of Fundy (Longfellow's Evangeline).
- Mississippi water (Mark Twain).
- Walden Pond water (Henry David Thoreau).
- water from Helen Keller's well.
- a hinge from Carl Sandburg's front porch.
- a leaf from Pearl Buck's home.
- bark from Sherwood Anderson's birthplace.
- bark from Mark Twain's Hartford home.
- a piece of a brick from Ernest Hemingway's Key West home.
- a rock from the Alcotts' foundation.
- a stone from Jack London's home.
- a rock from Vassar College where Edna St. Vincent Millay attended.
- a pine cone from William Cullen Bryant's home.

SOUTHERN PEOPLE

- Sixty-three Student Missionaries and Task Force volunteers are leaving the campus this summer for service assignments in 22 countries. Their destinations range from Australia and China, to New Guinea, Ecuador, and Romania. Many will teach on islands in the Pacific.
- Stacy DeLay, a graduating senior, won a $3,000 award as the only Scripps Howard Foundation scholarship recipient selected last summer in Tennessee. She was one of 137 winners chosen from over 700 applicants.
- An Outstanding Achievement in Science Education award was presented to Dr. Carl Swafford, associate professor of education, by the University of Tennessee-Knoxville this spring.
- Vinita Sauder, assistant professor of business administration, has accepted additional part-time responsibilities as director of institutional effectiveness and research at Southern College. She will continue to teach two marketing classes a semester.
- Dr. Cliff Olson, associate professor of business, received his new title of address from Colorado State University with the successful defense of his doctoral dissertation in the area of human resource development and sales training.
- For the final E. O. Grundset Lecture of the school year, Michelle Erwin, a junior biology major, told about her experiences with dolphins and the research and public programs of the Dolphin Research Center, a nonprofit educational and research facility at Grassy Keys on the Gulf of Mexico. This summer is her fifth stint of working with the dolphins, a total of 11 months.
- A $2,500 Harvard Medical School Research Fellowship for study of brain cancer was awarded to Docile Saguan, a junior biology major. The competitive award covers six weeks of summer study in Boston under the supervision of alumnus Dr. John Hensen, at Massachusetts General Hospital.
- Dan Rozell has been appointed by Governor Don Sundquist to a four-year term on the Tennessee Board of Examiners for Nursing Home Administrators. The board administers the NAB exam four times a year and approves the candidates who sit for this exam. The board also sets policy and metes out discipline to problem nursing home administrators.
- Bert Ringer is the new admissions adviser for the state of Florida. Formerly a pastor in the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference, he had been in private business for the past few years. Prospective students or their parents may arrange a visit with him by calling 407-786-4889 in Orlando.

- Tom Roberts will be presiding over the 1996-97 Student Association. Aaron Raines was elected executive vice president and Sheryll Hamilton, social vice president. Publication editors are Heidi Boggs and Christina Hogan, Southern Accent (newspaper), and Merrilyn Carey, Southern Memories (yearbook). The Strawberry Festival (year in multimedia) will be produced by Zachary Gray and Ruthie Kerr. Appointments include Kelli Chalker, finance director; Cheri Brumagin, secretary, and Kim Fenton, public relations.

- Krystal Bishop, '75, an experienced classroom teacher, is leaving her job as associate superintendent of education for the Florida Conference to be an assistant professor of education at Southern. She is working on her dissertation for her Ed.D. in special education administration. She has developed and presented "Gently Leading" and "Intimate Encounters With God" seminars. She and her husband, Charles, '75, have a daughter.

- Dr. Kenneth Caviness, '82, is joining the faculty as chair of the Physics Department. He previously taught at Southwestern Adventist College and in Rwanda. His doctorate is from the University of Massachusetts at Lowell. He and his wife, Claryce (Sarr), have two children, Larissa and Eric. Dr. Ray Hefferlin, who joined the Southern faculty in 1955, is shifting his emphasis more toward research, as much as possible of it with Southern undergraduates, and toward expanded contacts with colleagues around the world.

- Dr. Ann Foster, '79, is a new assistant professor of biology at Southern. This past year she taught biology classes at Cape Fear Community College in Wilmington, N.C. Prior to that she was a scientist at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, Medical Sciences Research Institute in Herndon, Va., and at the University of North Texas

Besides their diplomas, five Southern Scholars—Kristin Whitehead, Christine Sager, Karen Phillips, Kim Day-Camp, and Lisa Clark—received medallions recognizing completion of special honors curriculum involving interdisciplinary studies, honors courses, and independent study.

in Denton, Texas. The supervision of undergraduate student research is one of her special interests.

- Dr. James Hanson comes to the Department of Music from Thiel College in Greenville, Pa. He has also taught at Auburn Academy and Andrews University. His doctor of musical arts degree is from the George Peabody College of Vanderbilt University. Besides teaching vocal and choral music, Dr. Hanson has directed music festivals, guest conducted, and soloed in oratorios as a tenor.

- Denise Michaelis is coming to Southern as an assistant professor of education. Since 1993 she has been director for the Center for Academic Success at Atlantic Union College. Prior to that, she taught and was a principal in Sonoma County, California. Her master of arts degree at Sonoma State University emphasized special education.

- Stephen Ruf brings more than a decade of broadcasting experience to the classroom in his new role as assistant professor of journalism and communication. Since 1988 he has covered local government, politics, and environment as a reporter for WDEF-TV in Chattanooga. He has also anchored and reported for WDEF AM-FM in Chattanooga, WKGN, WNOX, and WKNX in Knoxville, and WSMC-FM in Collegedale. He and his wife, Jodie (VandeVere), '83, have two daughters, Sarah and Amanda.

- Dr. Bruce Schilling, formerly a research scientist with Argonne National Laboratory and Amoco Corporation (both in Illinois), is joining Southern's faculty as an associate professor of chemistry. He earned his Ph.D. in physical chemistry at the California Institute of Technology. He and his wife, Nancy (Habenicht), have two sons, Jonathan, 8, and David, 5.

- Jon Wentworth, '76, is joining the Department of Business as an associate professor following six years at Klabat University in Indonesia where he chaired the accounting department with its 450 accounting majors. A CPA, he also has over

FACULTY HONORED AT COMMENCEMENT

Dr. Jack Bianco, left, a 13-year religion faculty member at Southern, received the Distinguished Service Medallion in May. Nominations noted his spiritual and department leadership and his global mission orientation, as well as the Scripture paraphrase he undertook to enrich his personal devotions. Now published as The Clear Word, its royalties are contributing to a scholarship fund.

Dr. Art Richert, center, professor of mathematics, also received the Distinguished Service Medallion at commencement. The presentation cited his high expectations for students, his academic integrity, his sense of humor, and his personal concern for students at Southern over the past 26 years. A student commented, "His ability to explain the most complex concepts make him a natural teacher."

A teacher appreciated for his approachability, sense of humor, supportive attitude, and application of spiritual concepts to classroom materials was presented the 1996 Zapara Award for Undergraduate Teaching Excellence. Dr. Bob Egbert, professor of psychology, also received $1,500—a $1,000 gift from Thomas and Violet Zapara supplemented by $500 from Southern. Students have also appreciated Egbert's skill in counseling and his willingness to set aside time to meet student needs.

10 years in public accounting. His MBA, with an accounting emphasis, is from the University of Tennessee. He and his wife, Sheryl (Nelson), '76, have three children: Jennifer, and twins Thomas and Traci.

- Dr. Derek Morris was chosen as the 1996 Adviser of the Year. Each student at Southern has an adviser. Dr. Morris was one of 19 advisers eligible for the award on the basis of having six or more advisees and a rating by advisees of 4.4 or higher on a 5-point scale. He joined the Religion Department faculty in 1987. Sharon McGrady, assistant director of advisement, comments, "He cares about his students and it shows by the many favorable comments on their evaluation forms, such as 'He is always there ready to talk when I need it,' 'I really appreciate the support and prayers,' and 'the best!'"

SAULS SAYS FAREWELL

At the commencement of his retirement after 43 years of teaching, Dr. Lynn Sauls, '56, left, shown with President Don Sahly, gave the commencement address to more than 300 seniors, including six proteges from the Journalism and Communication Department he has chaired for seven years. His wife, Helen (Braat), '52, '63, is also retiring this year from her post as associate professor of education.

RESURRECTION • PAGEANT

About 3,000 students, guests, and area church members attended SonRise, the resurrection pageant held on campus on a cool April Sabbath this spring.

Its format was a leisurely one-mile walking tour with scenes representing Christ's triumphal entry, the last supper, Gethsemane, the trial, death, and resurrection.

Planned jointly by the Southern College Chaplain's Office and the Collegedale Seventh-day Adventist Church, the event was "an incredible success" because "it moved observers to think about the real significance of these events," said Dr. Ed Wright, senior church pastor.

Seven groups at half-hour intervals from 9:30 a.m. Sabbath morning to 12:30 p.m. set out for the 90-minute step back in time. A colorful cast of more than a hundred students and church families wore costumes made for the occasion or loaned by several youth camps. Hundreds of others helped with props, ran sound, assisted with tickets and parking, greeted guests, provided refreshments or radio communication, or transported animals. Goats, lambs, chickens, and a donkey lent authenticity to the Jerusalem street scenes.

The presentation was so well received that plans are under way to repeat it on March 29, 1997. •

SOUTHERN UPDATE

- The Symphony Orchestra left on graduation day for a two-week tour of England, Wales, and Scotland. The group planned to perform 10 concerts in various cities, including London. This is the seventh overseas tour for the orchestra since its conductor, Orlo Gilbert, joined the faculty 29 years ago.
- During spring break 14 students and 5 faculty members traveled to the Dominican Republic at their own expense to practice the principles taught in a new class, Frontier Nursing. They set up a clinic, provided free medical care, and gave health education lectures. Subsequently, air fare and open heart surgery in Chattanooga were arranged for two persons with heart abnormalities.
- Actuarial studies is the newest major on the menu. Offered by the Mathematics Department, the major is for those who enjoy math but don't want to teach. Professionally, it offers the first step toward becoming an Associate of The Society of Actuaries.
- Union College students joined their peers at Southern for the third Adventist Collegiate Band Festival, held in April. Clinician was Dr. Jared Spears, composer of over 250 original ensemble works as well as music for radio and television commercials.

- Elderhostel classes in organ music, the Civil War, and good nutrition were offered in March for 18 students age 55 or beyond. Similar events involve 265,000 students yearly at 2,000 sites. One participant summed it up, "This is one of the best Elderhostels I have attended, and I have gone to over twenty."
- Among Artist Adventure Series events for 1996-97 are saxophonist Neal Ramsay, the Anderson String Quartet, and Choirs of Wales. Programs last year included storyteller Bob Stromberg and folklorist Jean Richie.
- Southern received over 3,000 cash gifts in the 95-96 fiscal year. Gifts exceeded $2.28 million, the largest total in six years. Gifts-in-kind take grand total beyond $2.4 million. Generous alumni and friends contributed to scholarships, the Science Center, student mission and alumni projects, and WSMC-FM.
- Southern hosted 200 participants from 16 schools for the Southern Union Honors Music Workshop. Guest clinicians were Jonathan Reed, choir; David Schaffer, band; and Stephen Framil, orchestra.

FIRST GRADUATE STUDENTS REGISTER

Dr. George Babcock tosses the first apple on June 3, a landmark day with 32 students enrolling for the first graduate study to be offered by Southern. Classes began the same day toward a master of science in education (M.S.Ed.) degree with three choices of emphasis—outdoor teacher education, multiage/multigrade teaching, and inclusive education. Plans are under way to expand graduate offerings to the areas of religion and business. Graduate classes have been offered in the past with Southern as an extension campus for La Sierra University or Andrews University. A graduate catalog (or the undergraduate catalog) is available by calling 1-800-SOUTHERN.

- At the Gym-Masters show, The Final Countdown, at Chattanooga's Memorial Auditorium, the guest was June Scobee Rodgers, founding chair of the Challenger Centers for Space Science Education. One such center is in Chattanooga. She is the widow of Challenger shuttle commander, Dick Scobee.
- The first-ever Edward Lamb Community Service Scholarship Lecture brought Gilbert Burnham, M.D., '64, to campus to speak on HIV/AIDS: The Local Picture Through a Global Lens and on Rwandan Refugees: Reality and Metaphor. The scholarship lecture series purposes to provide humanitarian information by distinguished service-oriented people and to raise scholarships for service-dedicated students of promise.

CONSTRUCTION OF SCIENCE CENTER ON SCHEDULE

Laws of math and physics—perhaps the other sciences as well—are being applied to the new home for scientific learning. Designed by architect Peter Vukshich, the 62,500-square-foot Hickman Science Center should be "dried in" before August, wired in September, and substantially completed by early fall. Occupancy in 1997 by biology, chemistry, computer science and technology, engineering studies, mathematics, and physics departments is projected. "The structure is being built with the future in mind," says Dr. Wayne Janzen, building construction coordinator. He adds that it will be well appointed and functional, with plenty of space for every department.

- Catacombs, a gripping three-act story of faith, survival, and persecution, was presented by members of Destiny Drama Company as their home show in March.

- Accreditation at the master's level has been granted to Southern by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS) Commission on Colleges. A visit by a Substantive Change Committee to confirm ongoing compliance with the Criteria for Accreditation took place in mid-June.

- Two evangelism field schools are being held for ministerial students this summer. The first began May 11 in Columbia, S.C., with Ron Halvorsen, director of church growth for the Southern Union. The second begins in July in Murfreesboro, Tenn., with John Fowler, '64, secretary of the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference. Two adjunct teachers, Doug Bennett and Dr. Leo Van Dolson, are also working with Southern's students.

- The Alumni Association has designed an heirloom Southern College afghan which features favorite campus landmarks, with profits dedicated to the Century II Scholarship Endowment. The Alumni Association president, Mary Elam, is handling orders at 423-296-3210 and so is the alumni office at 423-238-2839.

- In February the College Board of Trustees voted to move ahead in offering a master's degree in religion with two areas of emphasis: advanced homiletics and church growth and evangelism. A summer program for pastors with at least six years of field experience, its classes would begin in 1997.

- The second annual conference on Object Technology Centers (OTC'96) was held in Atlanta in May, sponsored by COMSOFT which also sponsors the Software Technology Department at Southern. Southern's Dr. Tim Korson was the program chair, and Tom Kristek, head of IBM's OTC, gave the keynote address.

- About one thousand Adventist Retired Workers converged on the campus June 19 from all over North America for five days of fellowship and inspiration. Summer provides opportunity for the Conference Center (1-800-277-7273), residence halls, and cafeteria to host many groups and vacationing families. Some July bookings are Olympics-related, with Atlanta just a two-hour drive from the campus.

SENIORS READY TO "TAKE RISKS"

May 5 was a day of pomp and circumstance for Southern's 357 graduates.

Of that group, 52 received their B.S. nursing diplomas at an evening commencement in Florida.

On the Collegedale campus Dr. Lynn Sauls addressed 305 seniors, their parents, and friends, on "Taking Risks."

As class president, Ken LeVos responded on behalf of his peers.

Earlier, the Friday night consecration address, "Back to Our Future," was presented by Kendra Haloviak, assistant professor of religion at Columbia Union College. Baccalaureate speaker on Sabbath was Dr. Reo Ganson, associate director of education for the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

This year 16 graduated summa cum laude (a grade point average of 3.90-4.00). One of these was Kenneth Wright III, grandson of Kenneth Wright, college president from 1943 to 1955 and namesake of the administration building. The III doesn't actually represent the number of majors Ken completed, but it could. He graduated with majors in business management, marketing, and Spanish. His sister, Sharon, also graduated, with a major in music education (magna cum laude) specializing in organ.

Besides the Wright siblings, the class included three other brother-sister pairs, six sister pairs, a brother pair, and five married couples.

"International" also describes the class, with 29 graduates from 16 other countries. A world view and commitment to service is taking 20 of the 1996 seniors into a year of mission work as teachers or nurses for the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

So the scattering begins. Graduates take with them their Southern memories . . . and May Gorrie's words printed on the last page of their Southern Memories yearbook:

*Then will the flame burn bright
As you live close to Him
This is the fuel that feeds the fire
The flame won't then grow dim.*

THOSE WHO WALKED THESE HALLS

20

Jesse Cowdrick, '25, died May 23, 1996, at the age of 92. He had resided in Collegedale for the past 23 years, but enjoyed a recent trip West to visit his daughter, Eleanor Bankes of Park City, Utah, 4 grandchildren, 7 great-grandchildren, and friends. His career in education included all levels from elementary through college, and for a time he worked with U.S. government publications. He was predeceased by his first wife, Lois (Ries), and his second wife, Grace (Shafier).

Mona (Devo) Strickland Dart, '24, died July 26, 1995. Her husband Merrill preceded her in death in December 1988.

Robert Leo Odom, acad '24, died April 14 at his home in Chattanooga. He was 94. His 60-year ministry for the Adventist Church included 17 years in Spain, Panama, and the Philippines. In Washington, D.C., he edited the Index to the writings of Ellen G. White. For 21 years he edited literature for Jewish readers. He taught university courses in Germany, England, Indonesia, India, Argentina, and the U.S. Declared legally blind in 1983, he continued to write articles and books with the aid of his wife of 67 years, Martha (Montgomery), '24. These included a 300,000-copy Russian-language title in 1993. He was widowed by his first wife, Lela (Perry), a classmate who died two years after they graduated and went to Puerto Rico as missionaries. Besides his wife Martha, survivors include sons Bob, of Black Rock, Ark., and John, of Chattanooga, 2 grandchildren, and 4 great-grandchildren.

ALUMNI PATENT NEW DENTAL/MEDICAL NEEDLE

A new needle design which could revolutionize dentistry has been created and patented by two alumni. Dan Zunitch, '82, and Michael Wing, '91, began studying the problem of the commonly used "bent needle" technique in their sophomore year at Loma Linda University School of Dentistry. When giving local anesthesia in hard-to-reach parts of the mouth, dentists will often bend the needle slightly with a gloved finger before injecting. While this technique is usually successful, it has two risks: breakage and contamination.

After discovering over 500 articles about needle breakage, and surveying 1500 dentists, the two men set about designing the Variable Angular Syringe (VAS) needle. The device allows for conventional straight injection, while also giving the operator the option of pivoting and fixing the syringe needle up to a 55 degree angle without touching it. The VAS needle is now patented and can be manufactured similarly to the conventional needle now on the market. Universal in use, it can also be of benefit to medical doctors and veterinarians.

Dan and Mike worked on this project outside their regular schedules of classroom and clinical projects. They both graduated from the LLU School of Dentistry in 1995. Dan has joined the dental practice of Robert Kirk in Chattanooga. He and his family live in Rome, Ga. Mike has begun a residency training program in oral and maxillofacial surgery at LLU.

..... At rest

Kenneth C. Baize, '51, died Feb. 12, 1996. He was 73. From 1951 to 1956 he taught accounting at Southern and was accountant for College Enterprises. He and his wife, Pearl (Koger), attended, served at Mount Pisgah Academy for 11 years, then he was assistant treasurer for the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference for 15 years. Ken's funeral was in Charleston, S.C., following a memorial service at the Kentucky-Tennessee Conference office. Pearl recently moved back to Charleston from Hendersonville, Tenn.

Willis Elzie Cushman, '94, passed away on Feb. 6, 1996. He had been employed at the Southern College book bindery when it was still in business, then after retirement was self-employed as a financial planner. Survivors include his wife, Thelma Cushman, who is an associate professor emerita of home economics. He sleeps in Collegedale Memorial Park until Jesus comes.

Lou (Bowen) Hoar, '91, died in Ontario, Canada, on Feb. 6, 1995. She taught secretarial classes at Southern and was the president's secretary from 1951-60, while her husband, Paul, was principal of Collegedale Academy. Later she taught and retired at Kingsway College. Survivors include her husband, daughter Barbara Tand, and grandsons John and Tim Arena, attending.

Allison Roberta Titus, '20, a junior public relations and print journalism major, died Jan. 27, 1996, in a hiking fall in the Cherokee National Forest. She was born March 15, 1975. She was Student Association public relations director and sports editor for the Southern Accent. Her parents, Alan and Jane Titus, and brother, Brett, of Bolingbrook, Ill., as well as both sets of grandparents survive.

Jonathan Christopher Walker, '20, died from injuries sustained in a traffic accident on May 8, 1996, near Rock Springs, Wyo., enroute to California. He had just completed his second year at Southern College. His immediate family are parents Leonard and Betty Walker of Brownsville, Calif., and a sister, Jodi. The family had been missionaries in Africa. Jon was a nephew of Maxine and Richard Center (an SC trustee). Jon's girlfriend, Nancy Beal, attending, from California, survived the accident and had been released from a Salt Lake City hospital by press time.
