This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Library Publications at KnowledgeExchange@Southern. It has been accepted for inclusion in McKee Minute – McKee Library This Month by an authorized administrator of KnowledgeExchange@Southern. For more information, please contact jspears@southern.edu.
McKee Library will now be open until midnight, from Sunday through Thursday, starting Winter 2016 semester. The library has traditionally offered these extended hours during the week of finals but now will be offering them indefinitely. This change comes largely due to student demand, as well as the library’s addition of an evening supervisor.

Therapy Dog Visits
Throughout the fall semester, the library has had several therapy dog visits, which are well received by students and staff alike. The next visit will be on December 10th from 3 to 4pm. Photos by Seth Shaffer

Joy to the World! The Forgotten Meaning of Christmas
Isaac Watts; Paraclete Press Staff
Few people know that “Joy to the World” wasn’t written for Christmas at all. Isaac Watts wrote it in imitation of Psalm 98. He meant “Joy to the World” as a spiritual reflection on Christ’s soon-to-be, expected, triumphant return to earth.

Kids on YouTube: Technical Identities and Digital Literacies
Patricia G. Lange
The mall is so old school--these days kids are hanging out on YouTube, and depending on whom you ask, they’re either forging the digital frontier or frittering away their childhoods in anti-intellectual solipsism. This book cuts through the hype, going behind the scenes to understand kids’ everyday engagement with new media. It makes key contributions to new media studies, communication, science and technology studies, digital anthropology, and informal education.

Suggestions for Workshopping Writing as a Class

1. Model the types of comments you want students to make both in workshop and in your written commentary. Reader-response comments are the best. Use “I” statements: “What I struggled with as a reader was...” or “What I’d like to see more of...” or “I had concerns about a couple of things...”
2. Do a model workshop very early in the semester. Students can be given an anonymous manuscript to critique, which is then critiqued together as a class. The teacher can then describe his/her reactions to the critique: What was helpful, what was hurtful...
3. Carefully direct the workshop sessions. If students are left without guidance, they might give responses that are not helpful, but instead are inappropriate, silencing, and damaging to the class atmosphere, as well as to the student writer.
4. Practice active listening. And teach students to practice it.
5. Teach students to respect one another’s material. Everyone writes has the seed of autobiography in it. Students should avoid using the “so what” phrase and find another way to ask for significance or relevance.
