

CALL FOR PAPERS

Interdisciplinary Journal of Best Practices in Global Development (IJBPGD) is an international, multi-disciplinary, open-access, and peer-reviewed journal that is actively sourcing submissions regarding issues pertaining to best practices in the field of global development. This journal is published online bi-annually. The following is a list of titles for our first four volumes, and eight issues:

- Vol. 1, No. 1: Theoretical Concepts and Empirical Knowledge Regarding Best Practices in Global Development
- Vol. 1, No. 2: Lessons Learned from Practitioners in Disasters and Emergencies
- Vol. 2, No. 1: Integration of Faith Affirmation and Development
- Vol. 2, No. 2: Best Practices in Working with Orphans and Vulnerable Children
- Vol. 3, No. 1: Community Health and Empowerment
- Vol. 3, No. 2: Climate Change, Agriculture and Food Sources
- Vol. 4, No. 1: Regional Conflicts and Forced Migration
- Vol. 4, No. 2: The, Psychological, Social and Economic Consequences of Human Trafficking

The journal's goal is to disseminate the knowledge and experience gained by researchers, educators, practitioners, and students who are currently combating the wide range of issues affecting our global community. From social justice matters to environmental concerns, the journal provides a platform of collaboration for the world's development experts and students to present current topics and best practices.

The submission deadline for the first issue is March 17, 2014. The nature of the first issue is fairly general as to allow for minimal revision for manuscripts before this deadline. Please submit your manuscript via our website at:

<http://knowledge.e.southern.edu/ijbpgd/>

Submissions must adhere to the current APA style guidelines. More information regarding submission requirements can be found on our website.

If someone you know may be interested in this Call, please feel free to pass it along.

Sincerely,

Dr. Sharon Pittman
Executive Editor
